The objection, in commercial practice, to putting passenger cars at the head of the train on account of increased risk does not apply with the same force to troop movements. 372. In cold weather the troop cars must be heated with steam from the locomotive and this is not possible where freight rolling stock is placed between the locomotive and the passenger cars. 873. Baggage cars fitted for kitchen each end, leaving center space 8 by 8 by 20 feet for rations, ammunication, or baggage, can be loaded to 12,000 pounds total weight with safety. FACILITIES FOE ENTEAINMENT AND DETEAINMENT. 374. Rapid entrainment and detainment require, as a primary condition, ample space of fairly level ground alongside of the railroad tracks for approach of troops and wagons to cars. 375. Commercial facilities for passenger and freight movement are seldom well fitted for troop movements for the reason that at railroad stations and terminals where adequate trackage exists the passenger and freight facilities are often at widely separated points, and at the larger terminals the freight and livestock facilities are also separated. 376. Large car-storage yards, while they afford opportunity to collect the necessary rolling stock for a large troop movement, are generally of the close-tracked type and afford no proper space for approach to cars. (Pp. 78-87, Military Railways, 1916.) 377. Main-line tracks can not be used to advantage and would not often be available unless the railroad...
